

What did Refugees Need to Obtain a US Visa in the 1930s?

As the Nazi regime's attacks intensified in the late 1930s, hundreds of thousands of Jews in Germany tried to immigrate to the United States. To enter the United States, each person needed an immigration visa stamped into his or her passport.

It was difficult to get the necessary papers to leave Germany, and US immigration visas were difficult to obtain. The process could take years.

EXPLORE THE SEVEN STEPS THAT WERE REQUIRED FOR THOSE SEEKING TO IMMIGRATE TO THE UNITED STATES.

STEP I

Register for the Waiting List

Between 1938-1941, US law allowed only 27,370 immigration visas per year to be issued to people born in Germany or Austria. If you wanted to present your paperwork and be interviewed by the US consulate in the hope of getting a visa, you needed to register and join the waiting list.

By 1938, you could expect to wait for at least two years for a visa.

2 Gather Documents

While on the waiting list, you would gather all the documents you needed in order to be ready when your turn came up. You had to go to many different government offices and often pay fees to obtain these documents.

Some had expiration dates and you might have to renew them more than once.

STEUERADMINISTRATION The depth of the tests The dept
(Strasse) Steuerliche (Strasse) Steuerliche (Monata) Arastallung Steuerliche (Underwichkeltsbescheinigung
Gegen die Auereise der(n) Alle Mayridem logentelle. T. Johnston 1/35. geboren om 9. ft. 13.1.2. in 1/1992. Mah.
nd seiner Ehefreugeborenegeboren an

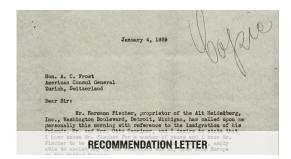

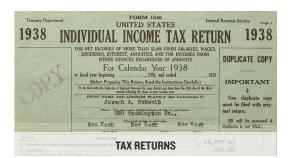

3 Find American Financial Sponsor

You also needed to find an American financial sponsor, preferably a relative, since Nazi Germany only allowed Jews to immigrate with a small amount of money and property. That person had to collect and send documents promising to take responsibility for you after you arrived in the United States. You would likely be able to communicate with them only by sending letters, which could take weeks to arrive.

After September 1940, the US government required two sponsors.

4 Buy a Ship Ticket

You needed to prove you had booked passage out of Europe. Travel became very difficult after World War II began in September 1939—with ports closing down and German submarines attacking ships in the Atlantic Ocean.

Tickets were expensive, costing the modernday equivalent of thousands of dollars.

5 Collect Transit Visas

You had to obtain stamps in your passport from all the countries you would need to travel through to get to the ship's port of departure. These stamps needed to be collected in a specific order, and each cost money.

One mistake could send you back to the same government office many times.

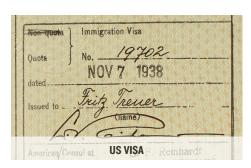

6 Interview with the American Consulate

When your turn came up from the waiting list, you would be called to the US consulate for an interview. The State Department official would carefully read all of your paperwork to make sure you were financially stable, healthy, and would not be a threat to US national security.

State Department officials often rejected applicants for economic or national security reasons, or told them to return later with more documents. Many documents and transit stamps had expiration dates, so errors could set you back months and cost a lot of money.

7 Acquire Visa and Journey to the United States

If you passed, the official would stamp a visa in your passport. You would fill one of the 27,370 quota slots available to potential immigrants that year.

LONG ODDS

Immigrating to the United States was a complicated, expensive process even under the best of circumstances. Hundreds of thousands of people, most of them Jewish refugees, applied at American consulates in Europe but were unable to immigrate. Many of them became trapped in Nazi-occupied territory and were murdered in the Holocaust.

GO TO NEXT SECTION: IMMIGRATION BY THE NUMBERS

UNITED STATIS II (OTLOGA USTE MEMORIAL MIUSTEURA

100 Raoul Wallenberg Place, SW Washington, DC 20024-2126 Main telephone: 202.488.0400 TTY: 202.488.0406

ir e-mail address Postal Code

D1--- 37---- 37!-!r

Current Exhibition

Calendar of Support the

DONATE

Learn

Teach

Collections

Academic Research

Remember Survivors and

Genocide Prevention

Antisemitism and Holocaust Denial

Outreach

Holocaust Encycloped

Collections Search

SUBSCRIBE

Holocaust Survivors and Victims

History Unfolded

Experiencing History

Early Warning Project